A Cry for Hope is about a couple who's lost their child to a horrible drowning accident and who have to take time away from each other to figure out whether or not they're going to stay together. This book was written so well that all the assumptions I'd made by the third chapter had been proven wrong before I got to the ending.

Now, three years later, this is a cry for hope to our brothers and sisters throughout the world. We invite our fellow Christians, their local congregations, churches and international ecumenical organizations, to receive and respond to our common witness, to join the process of confessing, and to initiate processes to formally reject the ...

There is a movement taking place in the hearts, souls, and minds of people of color in the body of Christ. It is not just in palatial suburban mega-churches and inner-city ministries; it's in institutions of higher learning. A leading expert in ethnically focused ministry for over 15 years, Charles Gilmer chronicles his early beginnings, from organizing a small para-church group at a historically black university to establishing a movement of evangelism and discipleship that impacts thousands of college students around the world. Gilmer uses his own mistakes and successes to explain why racial reconciliation has not been effective; how to nurture and develop emerging ministerial leaders that can cross cultural and racial lines; and how to develop effective leaders that are spiritually focused, financially responsible, and morally fit. These biblical principles and insights dispel the myths and misconceptions of ministerial diversity and offer a blueprint for effective evangelism.

"Girls, get back!" Ezra shouted. His face was pale, but his eyes kindled with indignation as he stood in front of the girls protectively. Ezra dropped the pitchers in the sand and his hand flashed to a dagger, concealed under his tunic. Jarah's eyes grew wide. He could be killed for carrying a dagger! Jarah was a slave in Egypt. It was a dangerous place to be. Her work was exhausting and her family was torn between the gods of the Egyptians and the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. And her brother ... would his Ada be given in marriage to an Egyptian in the palace? Would they ever be free? Adventure, excitement, love, and faith come together when Jarah and her family find themselves at the culmination of four hundred years of history"--Page 4 of cover.

This poem collection relates my deepest thoughts about the relationships with the loved ones and the world around me. It reveals my pain at experiencing loss, and celebrating my humanity. ?A Cry of Hope? and ?The Weeping Widow? touch on the heart-wrenching tragedy of innocent HIV/ AIDS sufferers. Personal yet universal, I seek to touch the soul of my reader with my heartfelt words of original verse. Briefly, my poem collection gives hope to the world in general that together, we can make a difference.

Examines the historical evidence concerning Merlin, King Authur's chief advisor, reviews the legends concerning Merlin, and discusses writings attributed to him consolation. This book is rich of consolations because it takes the cry of lament seriously." --Jurgen Moltmann "A timely, accessible, and valuable book. The recovery of the biblical traditions of loss and hurt is intrinsically worth doing, more worth doing in an increasingly disestablished society." --Walter Brueggemann, Columbia Theological Seminary, Emeritus "This cross-disciplinary collaboration is . . . poignant and compelling testimony to the personal and communal power of lament and its importance to the practice of ministry. This book is the one that I have been waiting for." --Christie Cozad Neuger, Brite Divinity School "Few books in the literature of lament have drawn together so much material from the biblical, theological, and pastoral spheres as Rachel's Cry." --Patrick D. Miller, Princeton Theological Seminary "Honesty with God is the doorway to authentic hope and faith. . . . This is one of the most liberating books I have read in a long time." --James Newton Poling, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary "This is the first book to bring scattered discussions together into one coherent whole . . . with deep Christian insight and conviction, with vivid examples, and with learning which is as gracefully communicated as it is broad and deep in its substance. I will be keeping it near at hand, so as to return to it often." --Nicholas Wolterstorff, Yale University "Rachel's Cry is not only a timely book, it is an urgently needed resource for people who long for a way to live with irrational suffering. Unless we recover the prayer of lament, we are in danger of being trapped in powerlessness, cynicism, and despair." --Herbert Anderson, Catholic Theological Union, Emeritus "I found it difficult to put this book down. Rachel's Cry convincingly argues that an authentic and empowering spirituality requires the language of lament and protest alongside praise and thanksgiving." --Nancy J. Policing is a consuming profession with incredibly high elements of stress. Research suggests that police divorce rates are more than double the national average of ordinary marriages. The spouse's fear of physical danger, adjusting to shift work, transfers and changes in the officers' personality are only a few of the contributing factors, but the most crucial problem is the breakdown of communication within the relationship. From the beginning of the officers' careers they are trained to control their emotions, and thus are accused of being cold-hearted. Spouses agree that law enforcement officers grapple with the real-life horrors on the job and that the bitter belief that 'cops don't cry' is sadly untrue.
