Bed of Bones by Cheryl Bradshaw is a thinly disguised romance novel. The disguise is a mystery novel which starts with a strong plot premise then melts gradually like the ice in a drink I didn't want. I keep going back to see if the drink gets better, it doesn't, and soon the ice is gone, or I can't find it.

investigates her first murder mystery. 38-year-old Rebecca Barlow drops her son off at her parents' home, promising to return by five. Five comes and goes. Then six. Then seven. Worried, Rebecca's parents try calling. There is no answer. They call her friends. They haven't heard from her either. It seems no one has. As concern for Rebecca heightens, her father drives to their lake house, a place where Rebecca has been staying. Her car is spotted in the driveway. Inside the house, her purse has been left on the kitchen table. But Rebecca is nowhere in sight. The following morning, Rebecca's naked body is found floating in the lake and questions abound. Did she drown by accident, or is something far more sinister behind the cause of her death?
