The endocrine system is a collection of ductless glands that produce hormones and secrete them into the circulatory system. Endocrine glands work without ducts for carrying secretions towards target organs. Instead, hormones can act as chemical messengers for a large number of cells and tissues simultaneously.

~~Endocrine System – Definition, Function & Parts | Biology ...~~

The endocrine system is a collection of glands that secrete chemical messages we call hormones. These signals are passed through the blood to arrive at a target organ, which has cells possessing the appropriate receptor. Exocrine glands (not part of the endocrine system) secrete products that are passed outside the body.

An animal ' s endocrine system controls body processes through the production, secretion, and regulation of hormones, which serve as chemical “ messengers ” functioning in cellular and organ activity and, ultimately, maintaining the body ' s homeostasis. The endocrine system plays a role in growth, metabolism, and sexual development.

~~Lab 12: Endocrine System — Biology LibreTexts~~

The human endocrine system is composed of glands which secrete chemicals called hormones directly into the bloodstream. The blood carries the hormone around the body, and when it reaches a target cell/organ it produces an effect. Compared to the nervous system the effects of hormones are slower but they act for longer.
