In the last ten years, there has been a revival of interest in the philosophical study of contract law. Much of the discussion relates back to Charles Fried's 1981 claim that contract law is based on the philosophy of promise, generating what is today known as "the contract and promise debate.". This volume taps into this renewal of interest by bringing together leading philosophers, legal theorists, and contract lawyers to discuss the philosophical foundations of this area of law.

The Philosophical Origins of Modern Contract Doctrine ...

The book claims that traditional theories of contract law which argue either that contract law reflects or mirrors the morality of promise, or instead that it pursues its own distinct ends or goals, such as economic efficiency, both seriously mishandle legal doctrine by ignoring or underplaying the irreducible plurality of values that shape contract law.
